Why do people engage in volunteering; and why do they continue? Some answers to these critical volunteer management questions!

Drawing on functional theories about the reasons, purposes, and motivations underlying human behaviour, Arthur Stukas and his team at La Trobe University, have identified six personal and social functions potentially served by volunteering.

In addition to developing an inventory to assess these motivational functions, the program of research has explored the role of motivation in the process of volunteering, especially decisions about becoming a volunteer in the first place, and decision about continuing to volunteer.

Be part of this stimulating presentation and discussion. Light supper is included.

To register, complete the following registration form and return it to Volunteering Queensland.

Arthur A. Stukas

Art Stukas, PhD, is a Senior Lecturer in Social Psychology at La Trobe University. With his colleagues, Professors Gil Clary and Mark Synder, he has written numerous scholarly articles on volunteering. These articles present research that takes a "functional approach" to study volunteer behaviour, which emphasizes the reasons, purposes, goals and motivations that people have for engaging in service.

Art received his PhD from the University of Minnesota in 1996 and has been working at La Trobe University since 2000. He is an Associate (Individual) Member of Volunteering Australia and an Affiliate of the Centre for the Study of the Individual and Society at the University of Minnesota.

Art's recent work has examined the effects of volunteering on social capital and also the ways in which organisational structure may influence the effects of ensuring that volunteers' motivations are matched with opportunities in the organisation or environment.
